At Jerusalem's Gate

Its him! Shout bands of rich and poor who block my view. I angle for a glimpse of him whose touch unlocks a blind man's sight, a deaf man's hearing. There he is! There! But what is this? No light shoots from his fingertips. His voice calls down no fire. And yet, they say a fig tree withered at his word. That he shattered death's door not once, but thrice, calling someone's loved ones back to life. That he speaks and demons cower. Perhaps he hides this power. He is, by all accounts, extraordinary, yet I find him quite ordinary. Until he turns and drinks me in. I gasp, a-tremble, grasp a palm frond and wave in a frenzy of praise and adoration, singing

Hosanna! Hosanna! Hosanna!
